INTERSECTIONS OF FINANCE AND SOCIETY 2022

Organised by Amin Samman (City, University of London) and Martijn Konings (University of Sydney)

Intersections 2022 is the fifth annual conference of the Finance and Society Network (FSN), hosted in association with Finance and Society and the City Political Economy Research Centre (CITYPERC). With financial support from the School of Policy and Global Affairs and the Department of International Politics at City, University of London.

Amin Samman is Senior Lecturer in International Political Economy at City, University of London, and author of History in Financial Times (Stanford 2019). He is co-chair of the FSN and lead editor of the journal Finance and Society.

Martijn Konings is Professor in Political Economy and Social Theory at the University of Sydney, Australia, and author of Capital and Time: For a New Critique of Neoliberal Reason (Stanford 2018). He is co-chair of the FSN and co-editor of the Stanford University Press book series 'Currencies: New Thinking for Financial Times'.

Finance and Society Network is an interdisciplinary research network dedicated to fostering new perspectives on the social implications of contemporary finance. It was founded in January 2018, after two successful conferences held at City in November of 2016 and 2017. Its core functions are to collate and distribute relevant announcements through a regular newsletter; to facilitate the organisation of events, including conferences, workshops, and other meetings; and to provide routes to publication through its partner outlets. More information available at financeandsocietynetwork.org

Finance and Society is an open-access journal dedicated to interrogating the central role of finance in contemporary society. It offers a unique cross-disciplinary platform, publishing theoretical and empirical research in which the socio-political character of finance and the society-wide implications of financialisation take precedence. More information about the aims and scope of the journal are available at financeandsociety.ed.ac.uk

Currencies is a book series with Stanford University Press, aimed at rethinking the core institutions and categories of financialised capitalism. Situated at the intersection of economics, the humanities, and the social sciences, its remit spans conceptually driven historical and empirical studies, genealogies of economic ideas and institutions, and work that employs new or unexplored theoretical resources to rethink key categories and themes. More information on the series is available at www.sup.org/books/series/
